WHY ANDREWS DELAYS DRY CRUSADE

GOOD MEN AND TRUE HARD TO GET POLITICS CUTS NO FIGURE

President Determined On This Policy—Assistant Secretary Andrews of the Treasury Department Is to Follow These Instructions, Which Will Delay Revamping the New Enforcement System.

President Coolidge is determined to give Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury a free hand in his efforts to enforce prohibition.

Indications were given Friday at the summer White House at Swampscott, Massachusetts, that Secretary Andrews would be given wide latitude in the selection of regional enforcement officers, the president believing that politics had been practically eliminated from the prohibition service and properly should cut no figure.

Before leaving Washington, it was disclosed, the president assured Andrews that he would have a free hand in making appointments and carrying on his warfare against bootleggers and rum runners and that he could count at all times on wholehearted support from the executive.

Not only is the president satisfied with the efforts made by Andrews to keep politics in the background, but he believes Prohibition Commissioner Haynes has succeeded in keeping his bureau practically free of political influences.

In his efforts to bring about enforcement of the Volstead law Commissioner Haynes, in Coolidge's belief has been prompted only by a desire to have an efficient force of agents regardless of their political affiliation or the requests of political office holders for favored treatment.

Altho there have been indications that Andrews is having difficulty in making up the personnel of his regional enforcement staff, President Coolidge apparently is in no way apprehensive that there will be any great delay in putting the new enforcement plan into operation. No arrangement has been made for Andrews to go to Swampscott for a conference with the president altho he, like other high government officials has a general invitation to come to Swampscott at any time he feels in need of the executive's advice.

Inability to draw able and efficient men quickly into his new prohibition enforcement organization has forced Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, to delay the date when the revamped enforcement system was to become effective.

The reorganization, which was to have been made effective gradually beginning August 1, therefore has been indefinitely postponed, in order that Andrews may comb the nation for men of the caliber he wants and to permit the working out of countless administrative details necessary to the new program.

In announcing the decision to delay the operative date of the change, Andrews declared Friday that he felt more optimistic regarding its probable success than at any time since taking the job as prohibition field marshal. There will be no lagging in finishing the task, he asserted, altho more time is available than had been anticipated at the start.

"I am convinced," he said, "that the success of the program will stand or fall by the character and ability of the men chosen as administrators. It was my intention to pick good, big men when I arrived at a conclusion as to policy and program. My intentions have not been changed."

VIOLATORS OF FISHING LAW GATHERED IN

Louis Conrad Languishes in Jail While Companions Paid Their Fines.

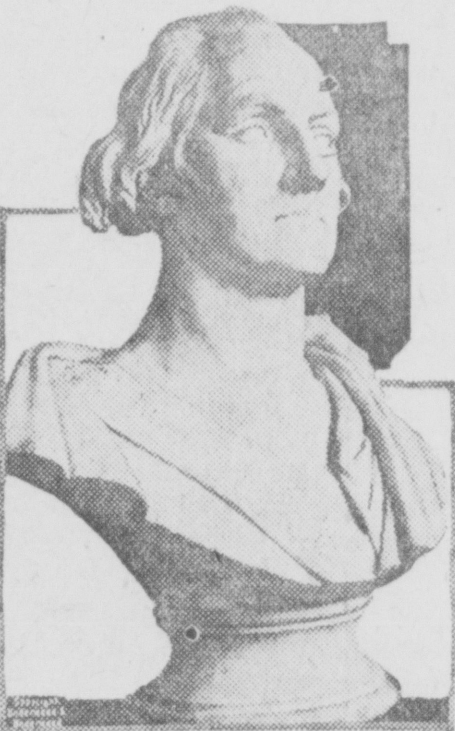

Way back in June 14, 1921, five men dynamited the waters at the dam of the Scioto river, and after the charge was exploded all the dead and stunned members of the finny tribe and sold them on the markets of nearby towns.

Recently Louis Conrad was placed under arrest by games protectors, William A. Francis, of Kingston; William Temple of Chillicothe and W. H. Downey, of Lucasville, and was taken before Justice I. M. Rossiter, who found him guilty and handed him a fine of $100 and costs and he has been languishing in the county jail ever since. His companions failed to come to his rescue and he squealed and in consequence Milton and Herman Conkle, of Lucasville, and Frank Conkle and Lafe Eby were placed under arrest, on an affidavit signed by Conrad. They were taken before Justice Friece Friday and each given a fine of $100 and costs which they paid and were released, but the first named prisoner is still in jail.

DRIVING SOUTH.

Richard Denman, Jakey Moore and Alva Smith left Thursday in a gasoline wagon for the Southland, down where the zephyrs blow more softly in the winter season and where they can rest in the shade of a Palm, fanned by winds scented with the odor of the orange blossom and the scent of the pine.

DAVID BUST TURNS UP

This bust of George Washington has just been sold by Mitchell Kennerly, head of the Anderson galleries of New York, to Henry E. Huntington for a price said to be about $10,000. Mr. Kennerly's sale was on commission for a junk dealer, who had bought the bust for $25 in 1914 and had no idea of its great value until Jo Davidson, the sculptor, picked it up and examined it one day. Paul Bartlett and Daniel Chester French then viewed the bust and agreed it was the work of Pierre Jean David, known as David d'Angers, which was presented by France to the Congressional Library early in the Nineteenth century. It was thought to have been destroyed when fire razed the Congressional Library in 1851.

NATIONS OF THE EARTH PREPARING FOR NEXT WAR

More Than Six Millions Men In Standing Armies of Fifty-nine Nations—Competitive Race Is Now For Air Supremacy—Great But Silent Preparations Being Made—Portents Fraught With Sober Significance.

Eleven years ago Wednesday, July 29, was fired the first shot of the big World War when an elated young Austrian officer jerked the lanyard that sent the first shell shrieking into panic-stricken Belgrade.

He little realized that he was initiating the most terrible catastrophe in human history which profoundly modified the map of the world and the lives of all the inhabitants.

Now, seven years after the end of the slaughter there are more men prepared and preparing for war than there were in 1914.

Official figures secured by the United States from the League of Nations in Geneva show there are 6,055,144 men in the standing armies of fifty-nine nations.

One of the contributing causes of the great war—the competitive race for supremacy in armaments—is today for the supremacy of the air. Great Britain has prepared an air budget of $77,565,000 designed to contest with France for domination of the air.

Only seven years ago after the most terrible of wars, nearly every power in Europe and Asia is preparing for the "next war." There is a great, but silent, preparation. Here and there daily are portents fraught with sober significance.

Thruout Europe the United Press has collected at random a few of these portents—straws showing which way the wind is blowing.

Herewith are only a few:

Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, the British secretary of state for war, replying to a parliamentary question, said British scientists have killed 1,001 animals during the past year in research for poison gases.

Mussolini, speaking in the Italian chamber said, Do you think that the Great War was the last war? It was not the last war. And we must not fancy that the war of tomorrow will exempt us. We must be prepared, because the next war will not give us time to prepare, but may come totally unforeseen.

The Japanese navy department has announced the construction of 22 warships with a total tonnage of 124,000. Japan decided to send seven experts to France, five to the United States, three each to England and Germany to investigate new weapons.

Frunze, war commissioner of Russia, announced to the congress of Soviets that the international situation will not permit Russia to reduce the army below 552,000. He said that if reports that England was leasing its islands in the Baltic were true, Russia would regard it as a warlike act.

Referring to a speech by Lord Birkenhead, secretary for India, attacking the Soviet, Foreign Minister Tchitcherine, of Russia, said:

"I cannot pass over in silence this extraordinary declaration. Birkenhead appears to be aiming at the breaking off of diplomatic relations with the Soviets and the next step can only be war. It is clear that Birkenhead and his colleagues are only looking for a pretext, the consequences of which cannot be foreseen."

Lord Jellicoe, famous English admiral, declared that naval disarmament was not "worth the risk."

A. B. Swales, chairman of the British Trades Union congress, said, "new wars more inhuman and ghastly than any in history are approaching."

Tests of a new gas mask are being carried out at the R. A. M. C. depot at Mill Bank, England.

Jugo-Slavia has bought an additional 150 military airplanes from France and Russia is purchasing large quantities of fighting airplanes of 1,000 horsepower, carrying six machine guns and a half ton of bombs and traveling 180 miles an hour.

London is recruiting an additional 500 men for air defense. To stimulate interest, mock air raids were held over London at night. Searchlights played over the skies seeking the droning planes, in exact imitation of the Gotha raids of war times.

Hadfields, the British munition works, announced the discovery of a 16-inch armor piercing shell which will mortally damage any battleship afloat, according to their announcement.

A British fleet is ordered to cruise in the Baltic this summer. In retaliation the Soviet government has ordered a "state of siege" at the Kronstadt naval base and a demonstration by their own fleet.

It is reported that Great Britain is planning a naval program that will include five new ten-thousand ton cruisers costing nearly three million sterling each. Says the Daily News, "What in the name of patriotism and common sense is the reason for challenging the world with a new and costly program?"

The British war office announced the largest infantry maneuvers held since the war will occur in the south of England this summer.

AGED SISTERS ARE BRUTALLY MURDERED

Bodies Are Found By Neighbors—No Indication That the House Had Been Robbed.

Hudson, N. H., July 23.—Two elderly maiden sisters were found beaten to death this afternoon in the home they occupied alone here. They were Miss H. Georgianna Gillis, 77, and Miss Helen Gillis, 80.

Although the crime apparently was committed yesterday, it was only today that the bodies were found by neighbors. The body of Miss Georgianna was crumpled in the pantry among broken dishes, her skull crushed by blows from a club.

Her sister apparently had been struck down in the kitchen, for blood had spattered the floor and her torn cape was found near the sink. The body, however, was found on a couch in the living room.

No instrument that had caused the deaths was found in the house by the police and no stranger was reported seen in the vicinity. The house appeared not to have been robbed or ransacked.

Reach of Gold

The Mary's Lamb of Radio--The Portable Set

Real Portable Sets Used Everywhere With Excellent Results.

MINIMUM weight is a most important feature of the portable radio receiver. But there is another consideration of equal or even greater importance and that is efficiency. Something more than a suitcase exterior marks a real portable radio receiver. Nature ally a receiver is not worth carrying no matter how little it may weigh unless it is capable of giving good reception in the remote places where a portable set is most apt to find extensive use.

Dry Cells Have Made Portable Radio Possible

"Dry cells of a standardized size are a universal commodity," H. T. Melhuish, of the Radio Corporation of America says: "They have so many different uses that they are found not only in the stock of the large radio shops but in the general store of the cross-roads hamlet. The owner of a dry battery type of radio receiver need not worry when he leaves the last outpost of civilization behind, as he journeys through the virgin wilderness for, if the stay is to be a lengthy one, a few extra dry cells will insure satisfactory radio reception for months."

Intercepting the Radio Waves

In a paper on Summertime Radio, Mr. Melhuish continues, "the portable radio receiver cannot always be 'installed' in the sense that a receiver is placed in the home. Therefore, the most desirable radio receiver should use a loop aerial as a radio wave interceptor. The vacationist provided with a loop operated portable radio receiver is free to go anywhere and his receiver is always ready for instant operation; nothing has to be erected or installed. The receiver may be enjoyed in the hotel room, on the boarding house porch, in the camp, on the beach, in a canoe, on the houseboat or even while riding in the automobile. That is real portability in radio receivers using dry battery tubes.

That Little Matter of Circuits

"If we insist on the loop wave interceptor as a requirement of our radio set then we must select the portable radio circuit with considerable care. Radio frequency amplification to build up the slight radio energy intercepted by the loop as well as several stages of audio frequency amplification to insure satisfactory volume for loud speaker reproduction are essential requirements. The super-heterodyne—the highest development in radio receiving circuits—as originally worked out by Major Armstrong, who was also the inventor of the regenerative circuit, meets all the requirements of a portable radio set using a loop wave interceptor. Through numerous refinements as well as through the development of the dry cell tube engineers have improved and simplified this circuit so that it has found wide application as the "home receiver."

The Mary's Lamb of Radio

"A portable receiving set—with loop wave interceptor of course—is in truth the Mary's Lamb of radio broadcasting for no matter where he goes, the owner of such a receiver will have radio reception following him around. Instead of gathering about the radio receiver in the home, the owner of a portable receiver has full freedom of action in the choice of a suitable setting for his radio entertainment. Radio programs come to him at his bidding anywhere; be it in the garden, in the house, in the distant hotel room, on the motor boat; no matter where, radio is there to entertain him and his guests at a twist of the dial.

KEEPING WELL

TYPHOID FEVER FROM OYSTERS

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

TYPHOID fever has broken into the front page again. This disease, which used to be one of the commonest of human afflictions, has been almost forgotten by everybody except health officers. Twenty-five years ago every large city in the world had, each year, hundreds or even thousands of cases. From a fourth to a third of a doctor's income came from his typhoid fever cases.

This disease used to be attributed to all sorts of causes: ground water, sewer gas, overcrowding and other conditions. Then in 1880, Eberth, a German scientist, found the germ which was responsible. It took 20 years of patient work to find that it most commonly gets into the body through sewage-polluted drinking water, dirty milk or food contaminated by flies or by the dirty hands of "human carriers."

Pure water, pasteurized milk and fly control have practically wiped out typhoid in the large cities. For years it has been found most frequently in rural communities where the water was taken from shallow wells and where raw milk was used. But the present epidemic is in the large cities. The disease has appeared among the well-to-do in New York, Chicago and elsewhere.

Investigation has shown that the water and milk were beyond suspicion. Flies are naturally not numerous in the winter. But three-fourths of the patients were found to have eaten raw oysters about two weeks before they became sick.

It has long been known that oysters, if fattened in sewage-laden water, would cause typhoid. Many Eastern cities empty their sewage into the ocean. Oyster fishers, after scooping up the oysters from the sea beds, plant them in shallow water to fatten. Burden found that typhoid germs would live in salt water for weeks. Foot found that they would live in oysters for 30 days. Gulon of Atlantic City proved that many epidemics of typhoid fever were due to polluted oysters.

Evidently some Eastern oyster dealers have allowed their oyster beds to become infected with sewage, or have placed their oysters in polluted water to fatten and have then shipped the dangerous oysters all over the country.

As a result, several state boards of health have prohibited the shipment of oysters into the state, unless it can be shown that they are harmless. Oysters are a delicious and a wholesome food, if pure, but they can easily become dangerous if careless or dirty methods of handling or shipping occur.

Meantime, while the oyster business is being cleaned up, the best thing to do, unless you know that the oysters are safe, is to let raw oysters alone.

Absolutely Replete With Thrills

When Ople Read, the writer, was a printer down in Tennessee many years ago he worked on a small weekly paper and boarded with the keeper of a small general store.

"My host," said Read to me, "was the most inveterate checker player in the state, and his wife was the best cook that ever lived in any state. The house was right next to the store and the place where I worked was just across the road. One day the dinner horn blew, and I broke for the store to pick up the old man and hustle for the table. I was as hungry as a bear, and as I came across the road I could smell fried chicken and other good things, and I fairly dribbled at the mouth.

"The husband was sitting at the back of the store playing checker with another old chap. These two were the checker champions of the county. I told him dinner was ready and begged him to come on, because I knew his wife wouldn't put the dishes on the table until he showed up; but he was right in the middle of a close game and he only shook his head.

"I stood there waiting, getting hungrier and hungrier every minute and madder and madder! That dinner was bound either to scorch or get cold—and maybe do both; but there sat that old pair of fossil silent as mummies and still as the grave. Neither of them moved an inch for fifteen minutes. Finally my host scratched his head for a couple of minutes—it seemed hours to me—reached over deliberately, picked up a counter, held it poised in the air for another minute and then put it back in its original place and said half to himself: 'Well, this is excitin'!'

"It was at this juncture," said Read, "that I hauled off and kicked his blamed old checkerboard clean out of the front door!"

HEADS VETS FOR THE THIRD TIME

FRANCIS J. COOK, Cleveland attorney, was unanimously re-elected Department Commander of Ohio for the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States for a third time, at their recent encampment held at Canton, Ohio.

During the World War Cook served with the 39th Engineers, Gas and Flame Regiment, but spent most of his time overseas on the general staff as secretary of A. E. F. Gas School.

He is a graduate of Ohio Northern University, with degrees of B. L. B. and L. L. M., and a member of Delta Theta Psi Law Fraternity and Epsilon Sigma Psi.

During the two previous years in which he served as Commander, the membership of the organization, which is composed exclusively of men who served overseas under the Stars and Stripes, has more than doubled, and it is this record which led to his re-election.

How Sargent "Got" Them

Only a fortnight ago Mr. Ernest Ipsen, a distinguished portrait painter himself, in talking of the character displayed or concealed in the faces of sitters, told me a story of Sargent. It seems that in painting Wertheimer, the artist was watching eagerly for the psychological moment. "Finally," said he, "I deliberately asked him a question about an interesting investment—then I got him." But indeed he nearly always got them; the strong set face of a soldier like General Wood, the lady whose gowns were more important than herself, and the lady whose face in its character would make you forget any gown, the wind and sea tan on the skin of an admiral, or the soft texture of the complexion of a little Beatrice Golet, the person who was bursting with health and the one who would soon see the doctor.

Yes, he got them.—Edwin H. Blashfield, in the North American Review.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LEGION WORKER IS GIVEN PROMOTION

William Stern, national vice commander of the American Legion, has been actively engaged in Legion work ever since the inception of the Legion. His interest and activity were recognized at the last national convention by his election to the national vice commandership.

At the caucus held at St. Louis in May, 1919, Mr. Stern was a delegate representing his home state of North Dakota. It was at that convention that the temporary organization of the Legion was effected. Since that time Mr. Stern has been a regularly elected delegate to every national convention.

Immediately after his return from the St. Louis meeting Mr. Stern proceeded to organize the North Dakota department of the Legion. The first post organized was Gilbert C. Grafton, post at Fargo, the home of the national vice commander. He is a charter member of the post.

Mr. Stern has been a member of the post executive committee and of the department executive committee since the organization of the department. He has been chief de gare of the Forty and Eight.

During the war Mr. Stern enlisted in the quartermaster corps as a private. Four months later he was made a second lieutenant. He was discharged from service February 10, 1919.

Mr. Stern was born at Fargo, May 19, 1886. He attended St. John's Military academy at Delafield, Wis. He also attended the North Dakota Agricultural college.

GOOD CITIZENS

NEWTON G. GILBERT, former governor of the Philippine Islands, in a recent address, said of the American Legion:

"Soldier organizations are only worth while if they function in peace as well as in war, and I believe that it is easier to be a good citizen in time of war than it is in time of peace. Everyone tried to be a good citizen during the war, but it is difficult for the same men in days of peace to be as good citizens as they were in days of war. The American Legion has made it possible for all veterans to be just as good citizens during peace-time through organized service to their community, state and nation, as they were during the patriotic days of 1917-18."

Travel Committee Will Arrange for Paris Meet

Appointment of the France convention travel committee in preparation for the national convention of the American Legion to be held in Paris in either 1927 or 1928 was made recently by James A. Drain, national commander.

The committee includes: John J. Wicker, chairman, Richmond, Va.; Alton T. Roberts, Marquette, Mich.; J. Monroe Johnson, Marion, S. C.; Bowman Elder, Indianapolis, Ind.; B. W. Ball, Bristol, R. I.; Wade H. Phillips, Lexington, N. C.; Albert Greenlaw, Augusta, Me.; Samuel Reynolds, Omaha, Neb.; George Hatfield, San Francisco, Cal.

The committee will make all plans regarding transportation and travel. Unprecedented low rates will be arranged with steamship companies, according to Mr. Wicker.

Printed Patterns Original and Striking—Craze for Polka Dots.

Silk has this season swept the whole fashion world, and the domestic silks of every sort and description are of pre-eminent importance, writes a fashion authority in the New York Times. The three-piece costume in which there is universal interest is that of silk or crepe, for it has a practical value in addition to its novelty. In the more elaborate ensembles one of the new heavy satins is preferred, bengaline, suede surah, orient or silk poplin. These have an indescribable richness and a certain dignity. The gown and lining of the coat of the finer silks, crepe faille, crepe de chine and chiffon, have a clinging quality that is enchanting, particularly when the fabric is printed in one of the softly tinted floral patterns. Nothing more alluring has been received from Paris this season, and the reproductions are being most cleverly done.

In design, the printed silks are original and striking. Some of the smaller patterns in dots, flowers, checks and geometries have a following now, as always. But the novelty is a bold pattern in many new arrangements and combinations. Some of these are so extravagant that a consummate art in treatment saves them from the grotesque. In an entirely original design one scheme is printed on one-half of the material, with another, entirely contrasting, on the other. These, of course, are handled, in making the garment, in a specific manner, and require much skill on the part of the modiste. Enormous disks of a gay color are printed over a plaid in black that covers a white background. Cubist flowers in several different shapes and colors are scattered over a surface of tinted silk, and many floral patterns, very large, are printed on silk of a contrasting, sometimes a pleasantly harmonizing color. Most of these, established by an American silk house of prestige, are in pussy willow weave and have the additional advantage of being washable.

In the skein-dyed silks from this same authority the most swaggy patterns are very large—wide stripes showing several colors, subtly shaded—huge plaids and blocks. Many of these are done in more than two colors, brown, red, yellow and white; blue, white and black, and in one of the most stylish materials presented, in blocks and overplaid lines of green, black, gray and white. In most of these more or less intricate patterns some black is used, a point that is evident in the finished gown, to which it gives a certain tone. There is a perfect craze for polka dots, especially the large dots, which are printed in every conceivable arrangement, varied in groups with smaller dots.

French Hats Are Small; Drooping Brims Promised

The early season French hats are small. The first shapes were extreme, with the high-peaked crown, extremely trying to most women, or square and tight. Later models have modified these points, and brims grow with the weeks, as Agnes Reboix, Georgetown, Guy and other smart Parisian designers are shaping them. The slight roll, the sharply turned side, and the high back are among numberless smart shapes, and the wide, slightly drooping brim is promised for summer. Much fine needlework, lacquered flowers and quantities of ribbon are shown on the latest chapeaux from Paris, though the general scheme is one of refreshing simplicity.

In Peasant Fashion

A frock of black satin gains in smartness by its sleeves made in peasant fashion. These are of heavy white crepe or georgette and have wide insertions of cut work resembling Venetian point lace.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Install Radio Outfits
in Veteran's Hospitals

All Veterans' Bureau hospitals are being equipped with radio outfits, according to information received recently by rehabilitation officers of the American Legion from Director Frank T. Hines of the bureau. The Legion has been urging this step for some time.

In 47 hospitals operated by the bureau radio has been installed or the equipment will be completed shortly.

Experiments already made prove that the radio is a highly valuable adjunct to hospital equipment. It is without doubt the most adaptable and popular of recreational facilities now provided for the disabled. The therapeutic qualities are considered to be as valuable as the recreational qualities. One important feature of this form of entertainment is that a patient may listen in or not as he himself feels inclined.

DETAILS OF FAMOUS LIQUOR CONSPIRACY

Headed By George Remus, of Cincinnati, Is Aired In Federal Court.

Indianapolis, July 23.—(UP.)— Details of the famous liquor conspiracy headed by George Remus, of Cincinnati, were aired in federal court today in the government's suit to destroy $200,- 000 worth of liquor seized four years ago in the W. P. Squibbs bonded warehouse at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Harry Patterson, Cincinnati, testified that Remus gave him $92,000 for the use of the warehouse when Patterson was acting as agent for Nathan Squibbs, owner of the warehouse.

Remus is now serving a sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta for violating the national dry laws.

Harry Hardewing, manager of the warehouse who was convicted with Remus, said whisky was hailed away from the place in trucks carrying as many as 150 cases each.

Hardewing identified records showing receipts and shipments of liquor at the warehouse. The government charges that 118 cases of the 1,550 seized were shown on the records to have been shipped to New York but were never shipped.

Nathan Goldman, of Chicago, testified he made frequent trips to "death valley" farm, near Cincinnati, and hauled away loads of Squibbs' whisky which had been removed from the warehouse and taken to the farm.

The government is seeking to destroy the liquor on the ground it was stored by Remus for use in his rum syndicate.

GRANGE SETS A GOOD EXAMPLE

This One Leads the Way Towards Better Law Enforcement.

A striking example of Grange leadership for law enforcement is furnished by the Grange at Hannibal, New York, which recently passed resolutions demanding rigid enforcement of the laws in Oswego county, and not only took up the matter with the county sheriff and other enforcement officers, but carried the resolution to all the churches in the town and neighboring localities and to every fraternal society holding meetings within a wide radius. The result was that the churches and lodges all endorsed the resolution and took a firm, united stand that prohibition and other laws in Oswego county must be enforced to the letter.

The agitation has been carried to such an extent that enforcement officers in all parts of the county are taking notice and the effects of the movement are already strongly apparent.

Denies Septuagint Taken From Original Hebrew

Leipsic.—Prof. Franz Wutz in his book, "New Facts on the Septuagint and Hebrew Bible," attacks the theory that the Greek-Alexandrian translation of the old testament, known as the Septuagint, is derived from the original Hebrew text.

The author is taken very seriously
by biblical scholars.

Professor Wutz comes out with the new and somewhat startling statement that the Septuagint is largely a reproduction of Hebrew words written with Greek letters. He claims to have discovered that as early as 200 B. C.
Jewish scholars utilized Greek-Hebrew texts for their translations into Greek.

These transcriptions, he believes, furnished not only an elucidation of the Septuagint—a feat hitherto considered impossible—but also opened up an entirely new vista in old biblical literature.

Rudolf Kittel recognizes in these discoveries a likely means of arriving at the much sought for original Hebrew text of the Old Testament.

There's a million or more in bloom.

"DR. JECKLE AND MR. HYDE"

Minneapolis, Minn., July 23.—
(UP.)—A physician who maintained two offices under different names, ministering to the poor under one identity and to the elite under the second, was under arrest here today on a charge of manslaughter, in connection with the death of Mrs. Lucille Marry following an alleged illegal operation.

Dr. R. J. Phelan maintained a suite of offices downtown for the wealthy.

Dr. W. T. Stevens maintained a suite on Nicolette Avenue, and aided the unfortunate.

When police arrested the latter, they found that they had also arrested the former. Chief of detectives Andrew Crummy said Dr. Phelan-Stevens confessed and made the statement that he would plead guilty to manslaughter charges.

The doctor said, family troubles induced him to assume dual roles in order to increase his income.

Dr. Phelan is his right name and Dr. Stevens was the assumed role.

MEN SHOULD LIVE 100 YEARS, SAYS SAVANT

Small Donation From Each Person
Would Do Trick, Declares
Sir Ronald.

London.—That the span of life can be extended to 150 years at the cost of sixpence a head, is the argument of Sir Ronald Ross, the English scientist, whose researches have led to cures for malaria and sleeping sickness. Sir Ronald claims that a sixpence from the pocket of every Englishman spent in scientific research would keep germs and old age away for at least 150 years.

The scientist thinks that the allotted span of three-score years and ten should find man in the prime of life,
instead of edging toward the grave.
We live curtailed lives, he says, because we are the prey of countless germs. Conquer the germs and man can easily reach the age of 150 and maybe longer.

"Eighty years ago," said Sir Ronald in a lecture, "the average life of a London man was about thirty-four years seven months and of a woman, thirty-eight years four months. Today it is fifty-three years nine months and fifty-nine years. Thus medical science in eighty years has given us twenty years more of life."

This start on cheating eternity has just begun, the speaker continued.
Nowadays the equivalent of one penny a head is being spent in Britain for research, and he asserts that the spending of a sixpence a head would make the monkey gland useless.

A scientist of the Pasteur institute in Paris has predicted that in 100 years from now the average man will live to be one hundred and fifty years old. Metchnikoff, the Russian scientist, has made the same prophecy. These visions of a future race of Methuselahs are to materialize through the agency of the research laboratory, in Sir Ronald's opinion.

The laboratory worker in the next generation, if allowed full scope, will trace all destructive diseases to their source and exterminate them, instead of combating them after they have appeared, Sir Ronald said. Already research laboratories are at work on important medical problems. The Pasteur institute is seeking to destroy cancer and tuberculosis and the Ross institute in London is working for the eradication of leprosy.

Advanced English scientists hope to see research laboratories in every large city in the world, financed by the state or municipality.

Homesick Spaniel Caught Hoboeing Back to Canada

Stamford, Conn.—Homesick for his former haunts in St. John, N. B., Finn, a pedigreed cocker spaniel owned by Murray McHugh, 94 Lincoln place,
White Plains, was "arrested" here several days ago on a charge of hoboeing.
Finn was coming down the highway with his nose pointed straight for Canada and a typical tenderfoot tramp limp in his hope.

He reached the farm of Robert L.
Case, who saw at once that Finn was not a hobo, but a dog of pedigree. He took Finn in, bathed and lodged him
and took the home address on the tag.
The Connecticut Humane society wired
New Brunswick and learned that Mr.
McHugh had recently moved to White Plains. He came here and took Finn home today.

Finn displayed a well-bred interest in seeing his master again, but when he left he constantly turned his nose toward Canada.

Leads in Newspapers

Berlin.—The United States leads the world in the number of newspapers published within its borders, 30,000, according to the newspaper Germania.
France is second, with 10,000.

The figures, however, tell a different story when the newspapers are compared to the number of inhabitants.
On this basis Switzerland stands first,
with 270 newspapers for every 1,000-000 inhabitants, and the United States is second, with 250. In England, the proportion is 98 papers to each 1,000-000 of people.

King Vidor, the brilliant young Metro-Goldwyn director, is proving himself one of the most versatile of the Hollywood megaphone kings.

His latest production, "Wine of Youth," a film version of Rachel Crothers' is as highly original and entertaining as it is different from his previous productions.

It is a story of modern youth, but it is free from the hokum and artificial jazz of the series of "youth" thrillers. Vidor makes his flappers and "cake-eaters" human; he deals with their lives with understanding and much humor and originality.

Flappers—But Human.
Altho the story is modern, it opens with two brief flash-backs, from which the stage title, "Mary The Third," was taken. The first scene opens at a dance in 1870. Mary The First is being wooed, and her choice of suitors—the romantic swain and the matter-of-fact, self-confident youth—is shown, with the latter conquering.

The picture then goes to 1897, with Mary The Second, daughter of Mary The First, being wooed in the same old New England house. Again she chooses the more aggressive suitor.

The Modern Era.
The story proper opens then, in 1924 with Mary The Third, an up-to-date flapper, being pursued by the contrasting suitors.
Eleanor Boardman plays the three Marys in their youth. In the third, or modern episode, Eulalie Jensen is the mother and Gertrude Claire the grandmother. The two brief vignettes provide a wealth of leading men for Vidor's production. James Morrison and Johnnie Walker are the first of Mary's suitors; Niles Welch and Creighton Hale are the lovers in the second, and Ben Lyon and William Haines in the third.

Pauline Garon adds to her list of no table flapper roles as Mary's friend in the third episode, and William Collier Jr. is her "sheik." Bobby Agnew plays the inevitable younger brother.

The film adaptation was made by Carey Wilson and John Mescall was the photographer. "Wine of Youth" is a Louis B. Mayer presentation.

At the Metropolitan theater Monday and Tuesday.

Treatment of Flax

Flax was ordered to be grown in England by statute passed in 1533 in the reign of Henry VIII. For many years the core of the flax plant was separated from the bark by hand. A mallet was next used, and then a water mill was invented in Scotland about the year 1750.

REPORT GERMAN KAISER HAD 8,000 SPIES BEFORE THE WAR

Billets in Villages and Towns of Belgium Arranged for Three Years Prior to Invasion.

Liverpool. — Prof. Bernard John Wilden-Hart, who has made military intelligence in Europe a study, in a lecture here before members of the Liverpool Geographical society, asserted that for several years before the war Germany had 8,000 spies scattered at various points between Berlin and Brussels. The German army billets in Belgian towns and villages had been arranged and scheduled three years before a shot was fired in 1914, Professor Wilden-Hart asserted.

The lecturer, who was professor of English at the Imperial Japanese university, Nagoya, from 1909 to 1915, and who has written numerous works on the espionage systems in Russia, Germany, Japan, Poland and other countries, said the German naval plans concerning the battle of Jutland were ascertained by British intelligence officers 24 hours before the fight, and that as a matter of fact, the English fleet moved first.

For young men desiring a romantic, adventurous career the speaker recommended the intelligence service, and said there were plenty of jobs on the continent awaiting the right men.

There were more spies in Europe today, he said, than at any time prior to 1914.

Dig Wells to Supply

Falls of Minnehaha
Minneapolis.—Picturesque Minnehaha falls, immortalized by Longfellow, will be saved by artificial means, undertaken by the local board of park commissioners.

Due to an abnormal deficiency in precipitation in recent years, Minnehaha creek, which supplies the waterfall, has suffered such a decreased flow as to make it impossible to sustain the falls. It was explained by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of the local park board.

As a remedy the park board has begun a project of supplying the water through the drilling of wells. An 800-foot well is being sunk in Minnehaha creek. Superintendent Wirth said, and it is hoped to strike a flowing well, but failing this, a pump will be installed. Should one well be insufficient, several others will be sunk.

Minnehaha falls has a beautiful 60-foot drop, and is about 45 feet wide.

Work on the project is expected to be completed by middle summer, Mr. Wirth said.

Buffalo Leads, Nashville Last, in School Costs

Washington.—Buffalo, N. Y., spends more per capita of average attendance for the maintenance of its public day schools than any other city in the United States. Its expenditure was $133.32 per pupil in 1924, as shown by statistical circular No. 4, just issued by the Department of the Interior, bureau of education. Springfield, Mass., was second in liberality with $123.70 per pupil in attendance. Nashville, Tenn., has relatively the cheapest school system in the group of cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and spent only $35.74 per pupil in 1924. The average for all the cities of this group was $95.64.

Airplanes Will Serve New Gold-Mining Field

Vancouver, B. C.—Success in the use of airplanes to carry miners and supplies to mining districts in Alaska and elsewhere in the Pacific Northwest has resulted in plans being made here for reaching the Cassiar country of northern British Columbia this summer over air routes.

Reports of rich gold strikes in the Cassiar were confirmed at the start of winter. Canadian police placed a ban on adventurers making the journey.

The Birmingham Small Arms company announced profits of 300,000 pounds sterling last year.

The allied military commission at Budapest, acting on a tip from the Hungarian government seized eight carloads of military airplanes which they alleged Rumania was attempting to smuggle thru Hungary in sealed cars under false declarations.

The Versailles inter-allied military commission reported that Germany is constructing the framework of a new army by training her police organizations as non-commissioned officers; that secret chambers where are concealed machinery for making guns were found in certain factories.

Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary of England, said in a speech at Birmingham, "Fear broods over Europe. Unless we can alter the outlook, relieve these fears and give security in the international sphere, it is brought home to me every day that I pass at my work that Europe is moving uneasily, slowly, it may be, but certainly to a catastrophe."

The Italian minister of marine urged the passage of a naval budget of one billion lire or fifty-five millions more than previously.

J. C. Davidson, parliamentary secretary of the British admiralty, announced in commons that 345 war vessels have been laid down in the world since the armistice and 200 more are projected.

France is establishing an air base at Cherbourg which is much commented upon in Britain. France denies it was designed to menace Great Britain.

The British combined fleet of 101 vessels, the greatest array of naval power gathered since the war, held war games in the Mediterranean.

Since the war Great Britain has completed several new roads. The roads toward the coast on the continental side are extraordinarily wide and graded so they can be quickly widened in case of necessity. The war office aided in designing them.

These and many other signs indicate that Europe is fast again becoming an "armed camp."

After several years' work, the League of Nations has finished complete assessment of the material losses of the world war, officially compiled from all the nations that participated.

Here is the net result of the shot fired eleven years ago next Wednesday by a gay Austrian officer:

9,998,771 known dead.
2,991,800 presumed dead.
6,295,512 seriously wounded.
14,002,039 otherwise wounded.
$186,333,637,097, direct cost of the war.
$29,960,000,000 property loss of the war.

$33,551,276,280 capitalized value of loss of life.

In assessing the capitalized value of life loss the League figures the value of a human life for war purposes at $4,720 for Americans; $4,140 for British; $2,900 for French.

Lightning Burns Clothing Off Man, but Fails to Kill

Twin Falls, Idaho.—Lightning blazed a circle about the head of Delfino Gonzales, Mexican track foreman and riddled and burned the hat, shoes and clothing off his body while he was at work aligning rails on the Oregon Short line Rogerson-Wells railroad front at Contact, Nev. He was brought to a hospital here suffering from burns. Gonzales was one of a number of workmen employed when the lightning struck during a rainstorm. All the others escaped uninjured.

Horse Catches Car

Sallisaw, Okla.—Although crowded out by automobiles, "old Dobbin" came back recently when he carried Jack Chuculate, farmer, past a speeding car of alleged motor thieves and crowded it into a fence. Chuculate drew a revolver and forced the men to drive to the county jail. He said they had broken the lock on the steering wheel of his car and drained the gasoline.

More Attention Is Given to Physical Education

Washington.—Physical education in schools is required by law in 33 states. Thirteen now have state physical directors of education and most of the states have definite requirements for the training of teachers and supervisors for this work. One school gave professional courses in physical education 45 years ago, but now 75 institutions offer two, three, or four-year courses, and post-graduate work is given in many schools. A summary of present state requirements for directors and supervisors of physical education has been issued by the Department of the Interior, bureau of education.

Tablewear
Mrs. W. B. writes: "One morning, being in a hurry to get down to the bargain stores, I asked my eight-year-old son, Harold, to change the tablecloth in the dining room. He willingly tackled the job, a new one for him, and, of course, found when he had removed the upper cloth a thicker one underneath. Much perplexed, he called up to me: "Shall I change its under-shirt, too, mamma?"—Boston Transcript.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

$500,000 FIRE

In Detroit Threatened To Spread Into a City Wide Disaster.

Detroit, Mich., July 23.—(U.P.)—Damage from a fire Wednesday afternoon which for a time threatened to spread into a city wide disaster was estimated at around $500,000 today.

Approximately 50,000 persons watched the conflagration which was one of the most disastrous residential fires in Detroit for several decades, almost an entire block being gutted by the flames.

No one was injured. About two hundred persons were made homeless, a large number losing their personal belongings. One apartment building was entirely leveled, a second partially destroyed, as were also two duplexes.

Children playing in the basement of an uncompleted apartment building are believed to have upset a torch onto a supply of pitch, starting the fire. The fire department had the fire under control after an hour's fight.

Legend of the Lost Mine

By JAMES BLACK

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

SLOWLY the tired burros paced across the sand-blown track. The desert marches had brought them to the end of their resources; but they plodded on, conscious, like Haynes, that evening would see them at the beginnings of cultivation.

That traversing of the sandy waste had been the worst thing in Haynes' prospecting experience. He had come clear across El Inferno, well named and something that he had been told could not be done.

But it was the legend of the lost mine attracted him. And he had not found it. It was a myth of the imagination. Well, at least he knew that now. He had paid for his experience.

Suddenly his eye caught something lying in the sand some distance away. A dead coyote—no, a man!

He ran toward him. To his astonishment it was an old man, nearing eighty, Haynes would have adjudged, a prospector, as was evidenced from his pack beside him.

The sagging trail in the sand showed that he, too, had crossed the desert, from a point some distant away from that which Haynes had selected for his own starting point.

Haynes had only enough water to take him to his destination, but he poured a half down the old man's throat. Presently the prospector opened his eyes. He began to talk, although he seemed not to know where he was. Haynes listened—he was speaking of Lost Mine.

"I found her," he was babbling. "It was me found what they call Lost Mine. You'll hear rumors of her everywhere in all the mining camps, but it was me brought back the word. Gold, the richest ever dug from the bowels of the earth—rich, red gold for the taking."

"I was a young man—this was long years ago. I hit on her by chance. I'd been prospecting and I got lost in the desert, and all my water was gone. Mad with thirst and delirious I must have been, and I wandered on and on without knowin' where I was goin'."

"Then I woke with the taste of water on my tongue, and a woman's face bendin' over me. And there was trees around, and flowers, and ripe fruits hangin' down."

"It was an oasis in the middle of the howlin' desert, and when I come to Pepita told me about it. It appears her grandfather and grandmother had found the place when they was travelin' west, and they had been fleelin' from the Indians who then scoured the plains. They liked it and they stayed. They never wanted to leave it. They was happy in each other's company."

"There Pepita was born, and there her mother and father died. And she'd lived there alone, and never seen another human bein'."

"And she nursed me and tended me and showed me the gold in the rocks, and for a long time I lived with her happy and content. What was the gold to me?"

"But then I began to hanker after the world without, and wanted to take Pepita away with me. And she cried and begged me to let her stay, because she'd heard the world was hard, and cruel people in it."

"But me—I was dreamin' of gettin' the gold out of the rocks, and takin' Pepita somewhere where we could live in comfort and elegance. And I missed seein' other folks."

"And one mornin', while Pepita was asleep, I stole away. Somehow—I don't know how—I crossed the desert. But I never found my way back to Lost mine."

Tears burst from under the shriveled eyelids of the old man. "All my days since I been tryin' to strike Lost mine, hopin' to find Pepita. God, if ever I found it I'd never leave again. And I can see it now, as well as ever before, with the fruits and flowers, and my gal a-waitin' for me—"

Suddenly a marked change came over the old man's face. He sat up and extended his arms.

"Pepita!" he shouted. "Look, thar she stands, stranger. I found her—jest as I told you—and she ain't grown old! I'm comin', Pepita!"

Haynes folded the blanket over the dead face.

What Calumet Means.

The Calumet region is the name given to a district in northern Indiana and Illinois lying between the Calumet river and Lake Michigan. Originally it was composed entirely of sand ridges and marshes. It is now a great industrial district, comprising such cities as Hammond, Gary, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and Whiting. Sometimes the entire region around the southern shores of Lake Michigan is spoken of as the Calumet district. The word "calumet" was the name given by the French to a pipe used by the Indians. This pipe, sometimes called the peace pipe, was the emblem of peace and hospitality. It was smoked to confirm all treaties between tribes. To refuse the calumet corresponded to a declaration of war, and to accept it meant peace and friendship.

One in 50,000 Wins Success in Movieland

Hollywood, Cal.—Figures compiled during the last five years by the largest moving picture producing companies reveal that the aspirant to stardom in the films must overcome a 50,000-to-1 chance of achieving success. The figures indicate that, in the last five years, screen service bureaus of Hollywood have supplied more than 100,000 men, women and children who at first were inexperienced in moving picture work. Of these 100,000, not to exceed six or seven have reached a point where their names were carried on the screen, and only two have become stars of any magnitude.

Many included in the figures had some theatrical experience, and the contrast is drawn with the fact that nearly all the prominent stars and featured players have had stage experience.

Banjo Now First Aid To Swimming Novice

Dear, — while were swaying they're playing "The Mid - night Waltz" —

Miss Guerin, High Diver, Adds Orchestra To Aquatic Curriculum

New York City.—Stroking to the strum of a banjo has become so popular here that swimming classes have small orchestras as a matter-of-course part of their equipment, declares Josephine Guerin, famous professional swimmer and high diver.

"The orchestras," explains Miss Guerin, "are non-professional and take their turn at swimming before the class is over just as the swimmers take their turn at orchestra-ing."

Violin and Cello.

"I tried the experiment one day of asking two friends to play 'Midnight Waltz' on the violin and cello when I was trying to teach the breast stroke. They sat on the pool's edge in their bathing suits and the pupils never dreamed at first that the music had any serious angle.

"The result was so good that I explained to them what I was trying to do and after that, those who had any musical turn, insisted upon continuing the concerts. You see, the music takes the mind off the breathing, which is the stumbling block to most beginners. At the same time that it distracts the mind, it produces rhythm, and instinctively the legs and arms follow the beat."

Directions

Miss Guerin's directions for the breast stroke follow:

POSITION: Hands clear in front, palms down, both legs together, straight behind you.

FIRST STROKE: Turn palms, pull to sides with both arms, keeping arms on a level with shoulders.

SECOND STROKE: Palms facing each other with elbows back, pulling in to the side of the body.

THIRD STROKE: Palms extending forward, arms straight, body floating, using frog kick for complete stroke.

Breathing for the breast stroke, is inhaling at first stroke, exhaling at third.

TENEMENT ARMY OF WALL STREET UNITED

Clubhouse and Playground Provided by Corporations.

New York.—Wall street with its skyscrapers houses an office population of 800,000 by day and is held by a tenement garrison of 10,000 by night.

Wall street is the sole livelihood of this skeleton force of nightfolk. In discharge of a sense of obligation it has quietly fostered an interesting piece of citizenship work the last ten years.

The major result of the work, leaders say, has been to convert the district from New York's most polyglot belt, with 1,400 families representing 23 nationalities, into probably its most closely knit, most homogeneous community.

Financed by 1,000 Corporations.

The work is financed by 1,000 corporations, firms and individuals under the name of the Bowling Green Neighborhood associations.

The activity is expressed, for example, in terms of a model four-story dwellinghouse on West street for headquarters; a $500,000 playground covering nine city lots on the river front; 25 flourishing orchestras and clubs for young people; nine social and political clubs and lodges for adults; educational classes, health clinics and community services in general which the association operates either singly or in conjunction with uptown agencies.

Irish pioneers, later joined by Austrians, Syrians and Greeks, head the census in downtown Manhattan, which also includes Slavs, Turks, Armenians, Serbs, Rumanians, Scandinavians and other nationalities seemingly too diverse ever to bring together. Yet racial demarcations, socially considered, are disappearing, association heads assert.

Common Employment Has Helped.

Common employment has helped toward this coalescence. Wall street buildings like the Equitable, Empire and the various banks carry on their payrolls for cleaning and other work some 3,731 women and 2,651 men of the neighborhood. They work split tricks at the start and the end of the night, as a rule, and often double in restaurants at noon. Annual earnings for families in the district, with both parents working, average $1,600 each, according to Paul Franklin, executive director of the association.

Group activities and the second generation of children have been the principal factors in the "get-together" phenomenon presented by the community, it was said. The association has long since dispensed with interpreters. Where grownups have not picked up English their offspring are on hand to piece out. To all practical purposes the 23 nations speak a common tongue.

Famous Mount

The Mount of Olives is a ridge with three summits, stretching north and southeast of Jerusalem, in height 150 feet above the city, 400 feet above the intervening valley of Kedron and 2,682 feet above sea level. It derives its name from the fact that it was at one time studded with olive trees.

Private O'Leary, V. C.

Michael O'Leary, one of the first men to win the Victoria cross in the war and now a resident of Canada, has been released from custody by United States immigration officials; he has been cleared of the charge of trying to smuggle aliens into this country. Michael won the cross in the early fighting in the Ypres sector. Alone, he advanced up to an enemy machine gun nest and killed half the crew, compelling the other half to surrender and bring their guns along with them. Michael was brought to London to be decorated by the king. Admiral Lord Fisher, that hard-bitten old sea dog, was standing about at the time of the ceremony and remarked: "Mr. O'Leary, you're a d—d good fighter, I wish to God I had you in the navy!"—Pierre Van Paassen in Atlanta Constitution.

Filibuster Developed to Nth Degree in Austria

Vienna.—A committee of the Austrian national assembly has been giving a striking exhibition of obstruction of the public business by a process of talking a measure to death. There is no regulation to prevent the committeemen from speaking forever, and some of them have declared their intention to talk until they gain their point, irrespective of the merits of the case.

There came before the committee the question of nominating a chairman to look into the question of city rents. The Social Democrats were opposed to Doctor Kienbock, former minister of finance, who was desired by a majority of the committee. They began a series of endless speeches on the duties of the chairman, and have kept this up for eight weeks.

One member, Herr Witternigg, has spoken for forty-eight hours, spread over a period of seven days. He recently announced he would "mumble" for seven days more. His method is to utter a word every thirty seconds, or two words a minute, and thus to prolong indefinitely his discourse.

TABLETS PROMISE LIGHT ON HISTORY

Yale Collection May Clear Up Abraham's Time

New Haven, Conn.—The J. Pierpont Morgan Babylonian collection, numbering several thousand cuneiform inscriptions and with other collections giving Yale university the largest number of unpublished tablets in the country, is expected to yield new light and fresh discoveries, making the time of Abraham, about 2000 B. C., as familiar to this generation as history of a few centuries ago, Prof. Albert T. Clay, of the Yale archeology department, announced here.

Several generally accepted theories regarding the beginning of civilization have been upset by the cuneiform inscriptions so far deciphered, Professor Clay asserts. One of these is the belief that Abraham belonged to the dawn of civilization. Inscriptions at Yale show records of 20 Babylonian kings who preceded him, and show remarkable advances in natural

Business Records Included.

Professor Clay, former president of the American Oriental society, has found on these tablets literary inscriptions, epics and hymns, prayers, omen and divination texts, syllabaries or dictionaries, and mathematical and medical treatises. Furthermore there are legal and business transactions recorded, documents and archives of the temples, personal and official letters and inscribed bricks.

"It is not generally known that Yale has one of the world's largest collections of cuneiform inscriptions," Professor Clay said. "It was through the munificence of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, who in 1910 established a chair of Assyriology at Yale in memory of his friend, William M. Laffan, the owner and editor of the New York Sun, that the creation of the Yale Babylonian collection was made possible.

"In 1921 it was magnificently augmented by the late Dr. James B. Niles, who bequeathed his collection of cuneiform inscriptions to Yale, where it had been previously deposited, together with a fund of $50,000 for its enlargement and publication. Including the gifts of several others, the Yale collection now numbers nearly 20,000 inscriptions. The Pierpont Morgan Library Babylonian collection numbering several thousand inscriptions, is also deposited at Yale."

These inscriptions are being made accessible to scholars. The Yale Press is publishing three different series of texts, the Yale, Niles and Morgan series, as well as a series of oriental researches. Twelve volumes of texts have already appeared, and several others are in course of preparation.

In addition, several volumes of researches bearing upon these texts also have appeared. The publication of these volumes was made possible through funds given by Ogden H. Hammond, '93 S., and George A. Kohut.

Forty kings of Babylonia and Assyria are represented in the collection by their personal inscriptions, while many others are represented by objects dated in their reigns. No less than a dozen rulers are represented by inscribed terra cotta cones in the shape of huge, roughly made nails. These contain records of the kings' pious acts in reconstructing temples or erecting shrines.

Tablet Contains Laws.

One of the treasures of the Yale collection is a tablet containing laws which have proved to be a prototype of the Hammurabi code. This tablet belongs to the earliest of laws at present known. Yahveh is recorded as the author of Israel's laws, while Shamash is depicted in relief giving laws to Hammurabi. The tablet says the laws are those of Nisaba, a goddess, and Khani, a god.

The most notable literary production as yet discovered in Babylonia is the epic which recounts the exploits and adventures of Gilgamesh, one of the earliest kings of the land. This is known from an Assyrian version on twelve tablets from the library of Ashurbanipal (668-626 B. C.), now preserved in the British museum. Unfortunately, the tablets are so fragmentary that only about half the epic has been preserved.

The Yale collection possesses a tablet giving a Babylonian version of this great epic, written fifteen centuries earlier than the Assyrian. It is the third of the series, the second having been secured by the University of Pennsylvania. These tablets of the early version supply missing portions of the epic. Each tablet has a lump of clay on each side, in order to protect it from being injured while resting on the shelf in the libraries of antiquity.

Finally, several thousand legal and business documents, deeds, leases, contracts of almost every description, including marriage and dowry contracts, particularly agreements, promissory notes, mortgages and documents granting the power of attorney, concerning bankruptcy, inheritance and divorce are found in the collection.

GOOD MEN AND TRUE HARD TO GET POLITICS CUTS NO FIGURE

President Determined On This Policy—Assistant Secretary Andrews of the Treasury Department Is to Follow These Instructions, Which Will Delay Revamping the New Enforcement System.

President Coolidge is determined to give Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury a free hand in his efforts to enforce prohibition.

Indications were given Friday at the summer White House at Swampscott, Massachusetts, that Secretary Andrews would be given wide latitude in the selection of regional enforcement officers, the president believing that politics had been practically eliminated from the prohibition service and properly should cut no figure.

Before leaving Washington, it was disclosed, the president assured Andrews that he would have a free hand in making appointments and carrying on his warfare against bootleggers and rum runners and that he could count at all times on wholehearted support from the executive.

Not only is the president satisfied with the efforts made by Andrews to keep politics in the background, but he believes Prohibition Commissioner Haynes has succeeded in keeping his bureau practically free of political influences.

In his efforts to bring about enforcement of the Volstead law Commissioner Haynes, in Coolidge's belief has been prompted only by a desire to have an efficient force of agents regardless of their political affiliation or the requests of political office holders for favored treatment.

Altho there have been indications that Andrews is having difficulty in making up the personnel of his regional enforcement staff, President Coolidge apparently is in no way apprehensive that there will be any great delay in putting the new enforcement plan into operation. No arrangement has been made for Andrews to go to Swampscott for a conference with the president altho he, like other high government officials has a general invitation to come to Swampscott at any time he feels in need of the executive's advice.

Inability to draw able and efficient men quickly into his new prohibition enforcement organization has forced Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, to delay the date when the revamped enforcement system was to become effective.

The reorganization, which was to have been made effective gradually beginning August 1, therefore has been indefinitely postponed. In order that Andrews may comb the nation for men of the caliber he wants and to permit the working out of countless administrative details necessary to the new program.

In announcing the decision to delay the operative date of the change, Andrews declared Friday that he felt more optimistic regarding its probable success than at any time since taking the job as prohibition field marshal. There will be no lagging in finishing the task, he asserted, altho more time is available than had been anticipated at the start.

"I am convinced," he said, "that the success of the program will stand or fall by the character and ability of the men chosen as administrators. It was my intention to pick good, big men when I arrived at a conclusion as to policy and program. My intentions have not been changed."

VIOLATORS OF FISHING LAW GATHERED IN

Louis Conrad Languishes in Jail While Companions Paid Their Fines.

Way back in June 14, 1921, five men dynamited the waters at the dam of the Scioto river, and after the charge was exploded all the dead and stunned members of the finny tribe and sold them on the markets of nearby towns.

Recently Louis Conrad was placed under arrest by games protectors, William A. Francis, of Kingston; William Temple of Chillicothe and W. H. Downey, of Lucasville, and was taken before Justice I. M. Rossiter, who found him guilty and handed him a fine of $100 and costs and he has been languishing in the county jail ever since. His companions failed to come to his rescue and he squealed and in consequence Milton and Herman Conkle, of Lucasville, and Frank Conkle and Lefe Eby were placed under arrest, on an affidavit signed by Conrad. They were taken before Justice Friece Friday and each given a fine of $100 and costs which they paid and were released, but the first named prisoner is still in jail.

DAVID BUST TURNS UP

This bust of George Washington has just been sold by Mitchell Kennerly, head of the Anderson galleries of New York, to Henry E. Huntington for a price said to be about $10,000. Mr. Kennerly's sale was on commission for a junk dealer, who had bought the bust for $25 in 1914 and had no idea of its great value until Jo Davidson, the sculptor, picked it up and examined it one day. Paul Bartlett and Daniel Chester French then viewed the bust and agreed it was the work of Pierre Jean David, known as David d'Angers, which was presented by France to the Congressional Library early in the Nineteenth century. It was thought to have been destroyed when fire razed the Congressional Library in 1851.

NATIONS OF THE EARTH PREPARING FOR NEXT WAR

More Than Six Millions Men In Standing Armies of Fifty-nine Nations—Competitive Race Is Now For Air Supremacy—Great But Silent Preparations Being Made—Portents Fraught With Sober Significance.

Eleven years ago Wednesday, July 29, was fired the first shot of the big World War when an elated young Austrian officer jerked the lanyard that sent the first shell shrieking into panic-stricken Belgrade.

He little realized that he was initiating the most terrible catastrophe in human history which profoundly modified the map of the world and the lives of all the inhabitants.

Now, seven years after the end of the slaughter there are more men prepared and preparing for war than there were in 1914.

Official figures secured by the United States from the League of Nations in Geneva show there are 6,055,144 men in the standing armies of fifty-nine nations.

One of the contributing causes of the great war—the competitive race for supremacy in armaments—is today for the supremacy of the air. Great Britain has prepared an air budget of $77,565,000 designed to contest with France for domination of the air.

Only seven years ago after the most terrible of wars, nearly every power in Europe and Asia is preparing for the "next war." There is a great, but silent, preparation. Here and there daily are portents fraught with sober significance.

Thruout Europe the United Press has collected at random a few of these portents—straws showing which way the wind is blowing.

Herewith are only a few:

Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, the British secretary of state for war, replying to a parliamentary question, said British scientists have killed 1,001 animals during the past year in research for poison gases.

Mussolini, speaking in the Italian chamber said, Do you think that the Great War was the last war? It was not the last war. And we must not fancy that the war of tomorrow will exempt us. We must be prepared, because the next war will not give us time to prepare, but may come totally unforeseen.

The Japanese navy department has announced the construction of 22 warships with a total tonnage of 124,000. Japan decided to send seven experts to France, five to the United States, three each to England and Germany to investigate new weapons.

Frunze, war commissioner of Russia, announced to the congress of Soviets that the international situation will not permit Russia to reduce the army below 552,000. He said that if reports that England was leaving its islands in the Baltic were true, Russia would regard it as a warlike act.

Referring to a speech by Lord Birkenhead, secretary for India, attacking the Soviet, Foreign Minister Tchitcherin, of Russia, said:

"I cannot pass over in silence this extraordinary declaration. Birkenhead appears to be aiming at the breaking off of diplomatic relations with the Soviets and the next step can only be war. It is clear that Birkenhead and his colleagues are only looking for a pretext, the consequences of which cannot be foreseen."

Lord Jellicoe, famous English admiral, declared that naval disarmament was not "worth the risk."

A. B. Swales, chairman of the British Trades Union congress, said, "new wars more inhuman and ghastly than any in history are approaching."

Tests of a new gas mask are being carried out at the R. A. M. C. depot

Jugo-Slavia has bought an additional 150 military airplanes from France and Russia is purchasing large quantities of fighting airplanes of 1,000 horsepower, carrying six machine guns and a half ton of bombs and traveling 180 miles an hour.

London is recruiting an additional 500 men for air defense. To stimulate interest, mock air raids were held over London at night. Searchlights played over the skies seeking the droning planes, in exact imitation of the Gotha raids of war times.

Hadfields, the British munition works, announced the discovery of a 16-inch armor piercing shell which will mortally damage any battleship afloat, according to their announcement.

A British fleet is ordered to cruise in the Baltic this summer. In retaliation the Soviet government has ordered a "state of siege" at the Kronstadt naval base and a demonstration by their own fleet.

It is reported that Great Britain is planning a naval program that will include five new ten-thousand ton cruisers costing nearly three million sterling each. Says the Daily News, "What in the name of patriotism and common sense is the reason for challenging the world with a new and costly program?"

The British war office announced the largest infantry maneuvers held since the war will occur in the south of England this summer.

AGED SISTERS ARE BRUTALLY MURDERED

Bodies Are Found By Neighbors—No Indication That the House Had Been Robbed.

Hudson, N. H., July 23.—Two elderly maiden sisters were found beaten to death this afternoon in the home they occupied alone here. They were Miss H. Georgianna Gillis, 77, and Miss Helen Gillis, 80.

Although the crime apparently was committed yesterday, it was only today that the bodies were found by neighbors. The body of Miss Georgianna was crumpled in the pantry among broken dishes, her skull crushed by blows from a club.

Her sister apparently had been struck down in the kitchen, for blood had spattered the floor and her torn cape was found near the sink. The body, however, was found on a couch in the living room.

No instrument that had caused the deaths was found in the house by the police and no stranger was reported seen in the vicinity. The house appeared not to have been robbed or ransacked.

The Mary's Lamb of Radio--The Portable Set

Real Portable Sets Used Everywhere With Excellent Results.

MINIMUM weight is a most important feature of the portable radio receiver. But there is another consideration of equal or even greater importance and that is efficiency. Something more than a suitcase exterior marks a real portable radio receiver. Nature ally a receiver is not worth carrying no matter how little it may weigh unless it is capable of giving good reception in the remote places where a portable set is most apt to find extensive use.

Dry Cells Have Made Portable Radio Possible

"Dry cells of a standardized size are a universal commodity," H. T. Melhuish, of the Radio Corporation of America says. "They have so many different uses that they are found not only in the stock of the large radio shops but in the general store of the cross-roads hamlet. The owner of a dry battery type of radio receiver need not worry when he leaves the last outpost of civilization behind, as he journeys through the virgin wilderness for, if the stay is to be a lengthy one, a few extra dry cells will insure satisfactory radio reception for months."

Intercepting the Radio Waves

In a paper on Summertime Radio, Mr. Melhuish continues, "the portable radio receiver cannot always be 'installed' in the sense that a receiver is placed in the home. Therefore, the most desirable radio receiver should use a loop aerial as a radio wave interceptor. The vacationist provided with a loop operated portable radio receiver is free to go anywhere and his receiver is always ready for instant operation; nothing has to be erected or installed. The receiver may be enjoyed in the hotel room, on the boarding house porch, in the camp, on the beach, in a canoe, on the houseboat or even while riding in the automobile. That is real portability in radio receivers using dry battery tubes.

That Little Matter of Circuits

"If we insist on the loop wave interceptor as a requirement of our radio set then we must select the portable radio circuit with considerable care. Radio frequency amplification to build up the slight radio energy intercepted by the loop as well as several stages of audio frequency amplification to insure satisfactory volume for loud speaker reproduction are essential requirements. The super-heterodyne—the highest development in radio, receiving circuits—as originally worked out by Major Armstrong, who was also the inventor of the regenerative circuit, meets all the requirements of a portable radio set using a loop wave interceptor. Through numerous refinements as well as through the development of the dry cell tube engineers have improved and simplified this circuit so that it has found wide application as the "home receiver."

The Mary's Lamb of Radio

"A portable receiving set—with loop wave interceptor of course—is in truth the Mary's Lamb of radio broadcasting for no matter where he goes, the owner of such a receiver will have radio reception following him around. Instead of gathering about the radio receiver in the home, the owner of a portable receiver has full freedom of action in the choice of a suitable setting for his radio entertainment. Radio programs come to him at his bidding anywhere; be it in the garden, in the house, in the distant hotel room, on the motor boat; no matter where, radio is there to entertain him and his guests at a twist of the dial.

KEEPING WELL

TYPHOID FEVER FROM OYSTERS

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

TYPHOID fever has broken into the front page again. This disease, which used to be one of the commonest of human afflictions, has been almost forgotten by everybody except health officers. Twenty-five years ago every large city in the world had, each year, hundreds or even thousands of cases. From a fourth to a third of a doctor's income came from his typhoid fever cases.

This disease used to be attributed to all sorts of causes: ground water, sewer gas, overcrowding and other conditions. Then in 1880, Ebarth, a German scientist, found the germ which was responsible. It took 20 years of patient work to find that it most commonly gets into the body through sewage-polluted drinking water, dirty milk or food contaminated by flies or by the dirty hands of "human carriers."

Pure water, pasteurized milk and fly control have practically wiped out typhoid in the large cities. For years it has been found most frequently in rural communities where the water was taken from shallow wells and where raw milk was used. But the present epidemic is in the large cities. The disease has appeared among the well-to-do in New York, Chicago and elsewhere.

Investigation has shown that the water and milk were beyond suspicion. Flies are naturally not numerous in the winter. But three-fourths of the patients were found to have eaten raw oysters about two weeks before they became sick.

It has long been known that oysters, if fattened in sewage-laden water, would cause typhoid. Many Eastern cities empty their sewage into the ocean. Oyster fishers, after scooping up the oysters from the sea beds, plant them in shallow water to fatten. Burden found that typhoid germs would live in salt water for weeks. Foot found that they would live in oysters for 30 days. Guion of Atlantic City proved that many epidemics of typhoid fever were due to polluted oysters.

Evidently some Eastern oyster dealers have allowed their oyster beds to become infected with sewage, or have placed their oysters in polluted water to fatten and have then shipped the dangerous oysters all over the country.

As a result, several state boards of health have prohibited the shipment of oysters into the state, unless it can be shown that they are harmless. Oysters are a delicious and a wholesome food, if pure, but they can easily become dangerous if careless or dirty methods of handling or shipping occur.

Meantime, while the oyster business is being cleaned up, the best thing to do, unless you know that the oysters are safe, is to let raw oysters alone.

Absolutely Replete With Thrills

When Ople Read, the writer, was a printer down in Tennessee many years ago he worked on a small weekly paper and boarded with the keeper of a small general store.

"My host," said Read to me, "was the most inveterate checker player in the state, and his wife was the best cook that ever lived in any state. The house was right next to the store and the place where I worked was just across the road. One day the dinner horn blew, and I broke for the store to pick up the old man and hustle for the table. I was as hungry as a bear, and as I came across the road I could smell fried chicken and other good things, and I fairly dribbled at the mouth.

"The husband was sitting at the back of the store playing checker with another old chap. These two were the checker champions of the county. I told him dinner was ready and begged him to come on, because I knew his wife wouldn't put the dishes on the table until he showed up; but he was right in the middle of a close game and he only shook his head.

"I stood there waiting, getting hungrier and hungrier every minute and madder and madder! That dinner was bound either to scorch or get cold—and maybe do both; but there sat that old pair of fossil silent as mummies and still as the grave. Neither of them moved an inch for fifteen minutes. Finally my host scratched his head for a couple of minutes—it seemed hours to me—reached over deliberately, picked up a counter, held it poised in the air for another minute and then put it back in its original place and said half to himself: 'Well, this is ex-cit'n!'

"It was at this juncture," said Read, "that I hauled off and kicked his blamed old checkerboard clean out of the front door!"

Lays Egg Inside Egg

Cape May, N. J.—Cape May hens have lined up on an economy program and are conserving space by laying one egg within another. HEADS VETS FOR THE THIRD TIME

FRANCIS J. COOK, Cleveland attorney, was unanimously elected Department Commander of Ohio for the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States for a third time, at their recent encampment held at Canton, Ohio.

During the World War Cook served with the 39th Engineers, Gas and Flame Regiment, but spent most of his time overseas on the general staff as secretary of A. E. F. Gas School.

He is a graduate of Ohio Northern University, with degrees of L. L. B. and L. L. M., and a member of Delta Theta Psi Law Fraternity and Epsilon Sigma Phi.

During the two previous years in which he served as Commander, the membership of the organization, which is composed exclusively of men who served overseas under the Stars and Stripes, has more than doubled, and it is this record which lead to his re-election.

How Sargent "Got" Them

Only a fortnight ago Mr. Ernest Ipsen, a distinguished portrait painter himself, in talking of the character displayed or concealed in the faces of sitters, told me a story of Sargent. It seems that in painting Wertheimer, the artist was watching eagerly for the psychological moment. "Finally," said he, "I deliberately asked him a question about an interesting investment—then I got him." But indeed he nearly always got them; the strong set face of a soldier like General Wood, the lady whose gowns were more important than herself, and the lady whose face in its character would make you forget any gown, the wind and sea tan on the skin of an admiral, or the soft texture of the complexion of a little Beatrice Goelet, the person who was bursting with health and the one who would soon see the doctor.

Yes, he got them.—Edwin H. Blashfield, in the North American Review.

Brief, and Pointed

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

William Stern, national vice commander of the American Legion, has been actively engaged in Legion work ever since the inception of the Legion. His interest and activity were recognized at the last national convention by his election to the national vice command.

At the caucus held at St. Louis in May, 1919, Mr. Stern was a delegate representing his home state of North Dakota. It was at that convention that the temporary organization of the Legion was effected. Since that time Mr. Stern has been a regularly elected delegate to every national convention. Immediately after his return from the St. Louis meeting Mr. Stern proceeded to organize the North Dakota department of the Legion. The first post organized was Gilbert C. Grafton, post at Fargo, the home of the national vice commander. He is a charter member of the post.

Mr. Stern has been a member of the post executive committee and of the department executive committee since the organization of the department. He has been chief de gare of the Forty and Eight.

During the war Mr. Stern enlisted in the quartermaster corps as a private. Four months later he was made a second lieutenant. He was discharged from service February 10, 1919. Mr. Stern was born at Fargo, May 19, 1886. He attended St. John's Military academy at Delafield, Wis. He also attended the North Dakota Agricultural college.

GOOD CITIZENS

NEWTON G. GILBERT, former governor of the Philippine islands, in a recent address, said of the American Legion:

"Soldier organizations are only worth while if they function in peace as well as in war, and I believe that it is easier to be a good citizen in time of war than it is in time of peace. Everyone tried to be a good citizen during the war, but it is difficult for the same men in days of peace to be as good citizens as they were in days of war. The American Legion has made it possible for all veterans to be just as good citizens during peace-time through organized service to their community, state and nation, as they were during the patriotic days of 1917-18."

Travel Committee Will Arrange for Paris Meet

Appointment of the France convention travel committee in preparation for the national convention of the American Legion to be held in Paris in either 1927 or 1928 was made recently by James A. Drain, national commander.

The committee includes: John J. Wicker, chairman, Richmond, Va.; Alton T. Roberts, Marquette, Mich.; J. Monroe Johnson, Marion, S. C.; Bowman Elder, Indianapolis, Ind.; B. W. Ball, Bristol, R. I.; Wade H. Phillips, Lexington, N. C.; Albert Greenlaw, Augusta, Me.; Samuel Reynolds, Omaha, Neb.; George Hatfield, San Francisco, Cal.

The committee will make all plans regarding transportation and travel. Unprecedented low rates will be arranged with steamship companies, according to Mr. Wicker.

Silks Prominent for Spring Wear

Printed Patterns Original and Striking—Craze for Polka Dots.

Silk has this season swept the whole fashion world, and the domestic silks of every sort and description are of pre-eminent importance, writes a fashion authority in the New York Times. The three-piece costume in which there is universal interest is that of silk or crepe, for it has a practical value in addition to its novelty. In the more elaborate ensembles one of the new heavy satins is preferred, bengaline, suede surah, orient or silk poplin. These have an indescribable richness and a certain dignity. The gown and lining of the coat of the finer silks, crepe faille, crepe de chine and chiffon, have a clinging quality that is enchanting, particularly when the fabric is printed in one of the softly tinted floral patterns. Nothing more alluring has been received from Paris this season, and the reproductions are being most cleverly done.

In design, the printed silks are original and striking. Some of the smaller patterns in dots, flowers, checks and geometrics have a following now, as always. But the novelty is a bold pattern in many new arrangements and combinations. Some of these are so extravagant that a consummate art in treatment saves them from the grotesque. In an entirely original design one scheme is printed on one-half of the material, with another, entirely contrasting, on the other. These, of course, are handled, in making the garment, in a specific manner, and require much skill on the part of the modiste. Enormous disks of a gay color are printed over a plaid in black that covers a white background. Cubist flowers in several different shapes and colors are scattered over a surface of tinted silk, and many floral patterns, very large, are printed on silk of a contrasting, sometimes a pleasantly harmonizing color. Most of these, established by an American silk house of prestige, are in pussy willow weave and have the additional advantage of being washable.

In the skein-dyed silks from this same authority the most swagger patterns are very large—wide stripes showing several colors, subtly shaded—huge plaids and blocks. Many of these are done in more than two colors, brown, red, yellow and white; blue, white and black, and in one of the most stylish materials presented, in blocks and overlaid lines of green, black, gray and white. In most of these more or less intricate patterns some black is used, a point that is evident in the finished gown, to which it gives a certain tone. There is a perfect craze for polka dots, especially the large dots, which are printed in every conceivable arrangement, varied in groups with smaller dots.

French Hats Are Small; Drooping Brims Promised

The early season French hats are small. The first shapes were extreme, with the high-peaked crown, extremely trying to most women, or square and tight. Later models have modified these points, and brims grow with the weeks, as Agnes, Reboux, Georgette, Guy and other smart Parisian designers are shaping them. The slight roll, the sharply turned side, and the high back are among numberless smart shapes, and the wide, slightly drooping brim is promised for summer. Much fine needlework, lacquered flowers and quantities of ribbon are shown on the latest chapeaux from Paris, though the general scheme is one of refreshing simplicity.

In Peasant Fashion

A frock of black satin gains in smartness by its sleeves made in peasant fashion. These are of heavy white crepe or georgette and have wide insertions of cut work resembling Venetian point lace.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Install Radio Outfits in Veteran's Hospitals

All Veterans' Bureau hospitals are being equipped with radio outfits, according to information received recently by rehabilitation officers of the American Legion from Director Frank T. Hines of the bureau. The Legion has been urging this step for some time.

In 47 hospitals operated by the bureau radio has been installed or the equipment will be completed shortly. Experiments already made prove that the radio is a highly valuable adjunct to hospital equipment. It is without doubt the most adaptable and popular of recreational facilities now provided for the disabled. The therapeutic qualities are considered to be as valuable as the recreational qualities. One important feature of this form of entertainment is that a patient may listen in or not as he himself feels inclined.

Earth's Crust

The shell of the earth beneath the Pacific ocean is relatively thinner than it is in any other part of the world. The Nero deep, near the Island of Guam, is 5,269 fathoms, or approximately six miles deep. This depth of water, of course, reduces the thickness of the earth's crust by just so many miles as the water is deep.

DETAILS OF FAMOUS LIQUOR CONSPIRACY

Headed By George Remus, of Cincinnati, Is Aired In Federal Court.

Indianapolis, July 23.—(UP.)—Details of the famous liquor conspiracy headed by George Remus, of Cincinnati, were aired in federal court today in the government's suit to destroy $200,000 worth of liquor seized four years ago in the W. P. Squibbs bonded warehouse at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Harry Patterson, Cincinnati, testified that Remus gave him $92,000 for the use of the warehouse when Patterson was acting as agent for Nathan Squibbs, owner of the warehouse.

Remus is now serving a sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta for violating the national dry laws.

Harry Hardewing, manager of the warehouse who was convicted with Remus, said whisky was hauled away from the place in trucks carrying as many as 150 cases each.

Hardewing identified records showing receipts and shipments of liquor at the warehouse. The government charges that 118 cases of the 1,550 seized were shown on the records to have been shipped to New York but were never shipped.

Nathan Goldman, of Chicago, testified he made frequent trips to "death valley" farm, near Cincinnati, and hauled away loads of Squibbs' whisky which had been removed from the warehouse and taken to the farm.

The government is seeking to destroy the liquor on the ground it was stored by Remus for use in his rum syndicate.

GRANGE SETS A GOOD EXAMPLE

This One Leads the Way Towards Better Law Enforcement.

A striking example of Grange leadership for law enforcement is furnished by the Grange at Hannibal, New York, which recently passed resolutions demanding rigid enforcement of the laws in Oswego county, and not only took up the matter with the county sheriff and other enforcement officers, but carried the resolution to all the churches in the town and neighboring localities and to every fraternal society holding meetings within a wide radius. The result was that the churches and lodges all endorsed the resolution and took a firm, united stand that prohibition and other laws in Oswego county must be enforced to the letter.

The agitation has been carried to such an extent that enforcement officers in all parts of the county are taking notice and the effects of the movement are already strongly apparent.

Denies Septuagint Taken From Original Hebrew

Leipzig.—Prof. Franz Wutz in his book, "New Facts on the Septuagint and Hebrew Bible," attacks the theory that the Greek-Alexandrian translation of the old testament, known as the Septuagint, is derived from the original Hebrew text.

The author is taken very seriously by biblical scholars.

Professor Wutz comes out with the new and somewhat startling statement that the Septuagint is largely a reproduction of the Hebrew words written with Greek letters. He claims to have discovered that as early as 200 B. C. Jewish scholars utilized Greek-Hebrew texts for their translations into Greek. These transcriptions, he believes, furnished not only an elucidation of the Septuagint—a feat hitherto considered impossible—but also opened up an entirely new vista in old biblical literature.

Rudolf Kittel recognizes in these discoveries a likely means of arriving at the much sought for original Hebrew text of the Old Testament.

RIOT OF COLOR ON GLAD FARM OF DR. BALES

Millions of Blooms Rivalling the Wonderful Hues of the Rainbow.

Lovers of the colorful gladiola, the the gladdest flower that grows, can feast their eyes on a riot of color in the field on the Bales farm south of the city on the Kingston road.

There are so many choice and prize Glads on view that it would take a column of newspaper space to name and describe them all. The varieties are beyond compare and they outshine the rainbow in their prismatic colorings. There's a million or more in bloom. Dr. Bales has been shipping from 12 to 18 hundred daily in the past two weeks.

Nature has been kind to the Glad family this season and they are now at their best. Go and see the field Sunday. It's a treat.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. David Armstrong and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Davis, accompanied by Carolyn and Gershon David, of Jackson, picnicked at the Logan Elm Friday and also visited the Gladiola farm of Dr. B. R. Bales.

Miss Nan Hunt, of Indianapolis, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Carruth of Bells Hill, was honored at a delightful luncheon, Wednesday, given by Mrs. Carruth at her home. The affair was small and charmingly informal, eight guests being present. Bridge followed the luncheon.

In the evening at six-thirty, Dr. and Mrs. F. R. Aldrich of the Franklin apartments, entertained at dinner for twelve, at the Country Club.

"DR. JECKLE AND MR. HYDE"

Minneapolis, Minn., July 23.—(UP.)—A physician who maintained two offices under different names, ministering to the poor under one identity and to the elite under the second, was under arrest here today on a charge of manslaughter, in connection with the death of Mrs. Lucille Marry following an alleged illegal operation.

Dr. R. J. Phelan maintained a suite of offices downtown for the wealthy.

Dr. W. T. Stevens maintained a suite on Nicolette Avenue, and aided the unfortunate.

When police arrested the latter, they found that they had also arrested the former. Chief of detectives Andrew Crummy said Dr. Phelan-Stevens confessed and made the statement that he would plead guilty to manslaughter charges.

The doctor said, family troubles induced him to assume dual roles in order to increase his income.

Dr. Phelan is his right name and Dr. Stevens was the assumed role.

MEN SHOULD LIVE 100 YEARS, SAYS SAVANT

Small Donation From Each Person Would Do Trick, Declares Sir Ronald.

London.—That the span of life can be extended to 150 years at the cost of sixpence a head, is the argument of Sir Ronald Ross, the English scientist, whose researches have led to cures for malaria and sleeping sickness. Sir Ronald claims that a sixpence from the pocket of every Englishman spent in scientific research would keep germs and old age away for at least 150 years.

The scientist thinks that the allotted span of three-score years and ten should find man in the prime of life, instead of edging toward the grave. We live curtailed lives, he says, because we are the prey of countless germs. Conquer the germs and man can easily reach the age of 150 and maybe longer.

"Eighty years ago," said Sir Ronald in a lecture, "the average life of a London man was about thirty-four years seven months and of a woman, thirty-eight years four months. Today it is fifty-three years nine months and fifty-nine years. Thus medical science in eighty years has given us twenty years more of life."

This start on cheating eternity has just begun, the speaker continued. Nowadays the equivalent of one penny a head is being spent in Britain for research, and he asserts that the spending of a sixpence a head would make the monkey gland useless.

A scientist of the Pasteur institute in Paris has predicted that in 100 years from now the average man will live to be one hundred and fifty years old. Metchnikoff, the Russian scientist, has made the same prophecy. These visions of a future race of Methuselahs are to be materialized through the agency of the research laboratory, in Sir Ronald's opinion.

The laboratory worker in the next generation, if allowed full scope, will trace all destructive diseases to their source and exterminate them, instead of combating them after they have appeared, Sir Ronald said. Already research laboratories are at work on important medical problems. The Pasteur institute is seeking to destroy cancer and tuberculosis and the Ross institute in London is working for the eradication of leprosy.

Advanced English scientists hope to see research laboratories in every large city in the world, financed by the state or municipality.

Homesick Spaniel Caught Hoboing Back to Canada

Stamford, Conn.—Homesick for his former haunts in St. John, N. B., Finn, a pedigree cocker spaniel owned by Murray McHugh, 94 Lincoln place, White Plains, was "arrested" here several days ago on a charge of hoboeing. Finn was coming down the highway with his nose pointed straight for Canada and a typical tenderfoot tramp limp in his lope.

He reached the farm of Robert L. Case, who saw at once that Finn was not a hobo, but a dog of pedigree. He took Finn in, bathed and lodged him and took the home address on the tag. The Connecticut Humane society wired New Brunswick and learned that Mr. McHugh had recently moved to White Plains. He came here and took Finn home today.

Finn displayed a well-bred interest in seeing his master again, but when he left he constantly turned his nose toward Canada.

Leads in Newspapers

Berlin.—The United States leads the world in the number of newspapers published within its borders, 30,000, according to the newspaper Germania. France is second, with 10,000.

The figures, however, tell a different story when the newspapers are compared to the number of inhabitants. On this basis Switzerland stands first, with 270 newspapers for every 1,000 inhabitants, and the United States is second, with 250. In England, the proportion is 98 papers to each 1,000 of people.

AMUSEMENTS
King Vidor, the brilliant young Metro-Goldwyn director, is proving himself one of the most versatile of the Hollywood megaphone kings.
His latest production, "Wine of Youth," a film version of Rachel Crothers' is as highly original and entertaining as it is different from his previous productions.
It is a story of modern youth, but it is free from the hokum and artificial jazz of the series of "youth" thrillers. Vidor makes his flappers and "cake-eaters" human; he deals with their lives with understanding and much humor and originality.
Flappers—But Human.
Altho the story is modern, it opens with two brief flash-backs, from which the stage title, "Mary The Third," was taken. The first scene opens at a dance in 1870. Mary The First is being wooed, and her choice of suitors—the romantic swain and the matter-of-fact, self-confident youth—is shown, with the latter conquering.
The picture then goes to 1897, with Mary The Second, daughter of Mary The First, being wooed in the same old New England house. Again she chooses the more aggressive suitor.
The Modern Era.
The story proper opens then, in 1924 with Mary The Third, an up-to-date flapper, being pursued by the contrasting suitors.
Eleanor Boardman plays the three Marys in their youth. In the third, or modern episode, Eulalie Jensen is the mother and Gertrude Claire the grandmother. The two brief vignettes provide a wealth of leading men for Vidor's production. James Morrison and Johnnie Walker are the first of Mary's suitors; Niles Welch and Creighton Hale are the lovers in the second, and Ben Lyon and William Haines in the third.
Pauline Garon adds to her list of no table flapper roles as Mary's friend in the third episode, and William Collier Jr., is her "sheik." Bobby Agnew plays the inevitable younger brother.
The film adaptation was made by Carey Wilson and John Mescall was the photographer. "Wine of Youth" is a Louis B. Mayer presentation.
At the Metropolitan theater Monday and Tuesday.

REPORT GERMAN KAISER HAD 8,000 SPIES BEFORE THE WAR
Billets in Villages and Towns of Belgium Arranged for Three Years Prior to Invasion.
Liverpool. — Prof. Bernard John Wilden-Hart, who has made military intelligence in Europe a study, in a lecture here before members of the Liverpool Geographical society, asserted that for several years before the war Germany had 8,000 spies scattered at various points between Berlin and Brussels. The German army billets in Belgian towns and villages had been arranged and scheduled three years before a shot was fired in 1914, Professor Wilden-Hart asserted.
The lecturer, who was professor of English at the Imperial Japanese university, Nagoya, from 1909 to 1915, and who has written numerous works on the espionage systems in Russia, Germany, Japan, Poland and other countries, said the German naval plans concerning the battle of Jutland were ascertained by British intelligence officers 24 hours before the fight, and that as a matter of fact, the English fleet moved first.
For young men desiring a romantic, adventurous career the speaker recommended the intelligence service, and said there were plenty of jobs on the continent awaiting the right men.
There were more spies in Europe today, he said, than at any time prior to 1914.

Dig Wells to Supply Falls of Minnehaha
Minneapolis. — Picturesque Minnehaha falls, immortalized by Longfellow, will be saved by artificial means, undertaken by the local board of park commissioners.
Due to an abnormal deficiency in precipitation in recent years, Minnehaha creek, which supplies the waterfall, has suffered such a decreased flow as to make it impossible to sustain the falls, it was explained by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of the local park board.
As a remedy the park board has begun a project of supplying the water through the drilling of wells. An 800-foot well is being sunk in Minnehaha creak. Superintendent Wirth said, and it is hoped to strike a flowing well, but failing this, a pump will be installed. Should one well be insufficient, several others will be sunk.
Minnehaha falls has a beautiful 60-foot drop, and is about 45 feet wide.
Work on the project is expected to be completed by middle summer, Mr. Wirth said.

Buffalo Leads, Nashville Last, in School Costs
Washington. — Buffalo, N. Y., spends more per capita of average attendance for the maintenance of its public day schools than any other city in the United States. Its expenditure was $133.32 per pupil in 1924, as shown by statistical circular No. 4, just issued by the Department of the Interior, bureau of education. Springfield, Mass., was second in liberality with $123.70 per pupil in attendance. Nashville, Tenn., has relatively the cheapest school system in the group of cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and spent only $35.74 per pupil in 1924. The average for all the cities of this group was $95.64.

Airplanes Will Serve New Gold-Mining Field
Vancouver, B. C. — Success in the use of airplanes to carry miners and supplies to mining districts in Alaska and elsewhere in the Pacific Northwest has resulted in plans being made here for reaching the Cassiar country of northern British Columbia this summer over air routes.
Reports of rich gold strikes in the Cassiar were confirmed at the start of winter. Canadian police placed a ban on adventurers making the journey.

The Birmingham Small Arms company announced profits of 300,000 pounds sterling last year.
The allied military commission at Budapest, acting on a tip from the Hungarian government seized eight carloads of military airplanes which they alleged Rumania was attempting to smuggle thru Hungary in sealed cars under false declarations.
The Versailles inter-allied military commission reported that Germany is constructing the framework of a new army by training her police organizations as non-commissioned officers; that secret chambers where are concealed machinery for making guns were found in certain factories.
Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary of England, said in a speech at Birmingham, "Fear broods over Europe. Unless we can alter the outlook, relieve these fears and give security in the international sphere, it is brought home to me every day that I pass at my work that Europe is moving uneasily, slowly, it may be, but certainly to a catastrophe."
The Italian minister of marine urged the passage of a naval budget of one billion lire or fifty-five millions more than previously.
J. C. Davidson, parliamentary secretary of the British admiralty, announced in commons that 345 war vessels have been laid down in the world since the armistice and 200 more are projected.
France is establishing an air base at Cherbourg which is much commented upon in Britain. France denies it was designed to menace Great Britain.
The British combined fleet of 101 vessels, the greatest array of naval power gathered since the war, held war games in the Mediterranean.
Since the war Great Britain has completed several new roads. The roads toward the coast on the continental side are extraordinarily wide and graded so they can be quickly widened in case of necessity. The war office aided in designing them.
These and many other signs indicate that Europe is fast again becoming an "armed camp."
After several years' work, the League of Nations has finished complete assessment of the material losses of the world war, officially compiled from all the nations that participated.
Here is the net result of the shot fired eleven years ago next Wednesday by a gay Austrian officer:
9,998,771 known dead.
2,991,800 presumed dead.
6,295,512 seriously wounded.
14,002,039 otherwise wounded.
$186,333,637,097, direct cost of the war.
$29,960,000,000 property loss of the war.
$33,551,276,280 capitalized value of loss of life.
In assessing the capitalized value of life loss the League figures the value of a human life for war purposes at $4,720 for Americans; $4,140 for British; $2,900 for French.

More Attention Is Given to Physical Education
Washington. — Physical education in schools is required by law in 33 states. Thirteen now have state physical directors of education and most of the states have definite requirements for the training of teachers and supervisors for this work. One school gave professional courses in physical education 45 years ago, but now 75 institutions offer two, three, or four-year courses, and post-graduate work is given in many schools. A summary of present state requirements for directors and supervisors of physical education has been issued by the Department of the Interior, bureau of education.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity
Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide:
(1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
(2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
(3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.
This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.
Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

$500,000 FIRE

In Detroit Threatened To Spread
Into a City Wide Disaster.

Detroit, Mich., July 23.—(UP).—Damage from a fire Wednesday afternoon which for a time threatened to spread into a city wide disaster was estimated at around $500,000 today.

Approximately 50,000 persons watched the conflagration which was one of the most disastrous residential fires in Detroit for several decades, almost an entire block being gutted by the flames.

No one was injured. About two hundred persons were made homeless, a large number losing their personal belongings. One apartment building was entirely leveled, a second partially destroyed, as were also two duplexes.

Children playing in the basement of an uncompleted apartment building are believed to have upset a torch onto a supply of pitch, starting the fire. The fire department had the fire under control after an hour's fight.

Legend of the Lost Mine

By JAMES BLACK

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

SLOWLY the tired burros paced across the sand-blown track. The desert marshes had brought them to the end of their resources; but they plodded on, conscious, like Haynes, that evening would see them at the beginnings of cultivation.

That traversing of the sandy waste had been the worst thing in Haynes' prospecting experience. He had come clear across El Inferno, well named and something that he had been told could not be done.

But it was the legend of the lost mine attracted him. And he had not found it. It was a myth of the imagination. Well, at least he knew that now. He had paid for his experience.

Suddenly his eye caught something lying in the sand some distance away. A dead coyote—no, a man!

He ran toward him. To his astonishment it was an old man, nearing eighty, Haynes would have adjudged, a prospector, as was evidenced from his pack beside him.

The sagging trail in the sand showed that he, too, had crossed the desert, from a point some distant away from that which Haynes had selected for his own starting point.

Haynes had only enough water to take him to his destination, but he poured a half down the old man's throat. Presently the prospector opened his eyes. He began to talk, although he seemed not to know where he was. Haynes listened—he was speaking of Lost Mine.

"I found her," he was babbling. "It was me found what they call Lost Mine. You'll hear rumors of her everywhere in all the mining camps, but it was me brought back the word. Gold, the richest ever dug from the bowels of the earth—rich, red gold for the taking.

"I was a young man—this was long years ago. I hit on her by chance. I'd been prospectin' and I got lost in the desert, and all my water was gone. Mad with thirst and delirious I must have been, and I wandered on and on without knowin' where I was goin'.

"Then I woke with the taste of water on my tongue, and a woman's face bendin' over me. And there was trees around, and flowers, and ripe fruits hangin' down.

"It was an oasis in the middle of the howlin' desert, and when I come to Pepita told me about it. It appears her grandfather and grandmother had found the place when they was travelin' west, and they had been fleein' from the Indians who then scoured the plains. They liked it and they stayed. They never wanted to leave it. They was happy in each other's company.

"There Pepita was born, and there her mother and father died. And she'd lived there alone, and never seen another human bein'.

"And she nursed me and tended me and showed me the gold in the rocks, and for a long time I lived with her happy and content. What was the gold to me?

"But then I began to hanker after the world without, and wanted to take Pepita away with me. And she cried and begged me to let her stay, because she'd heard the world was hard, and cruel people in it.

"But me—I was dreamin' of gettin' the gold out of the rocks, and takin' Pepita somewhere where we could live in comfort and elegance. And I missed seein' other folks.

"And one mornin', while Pepita was asleep, I stole away. Somehow—I don't know how—I crossed the desert. But I never found my way back to Lost mine."

Tears burst from under the shriveled eyelids of the old man.

"All my days since I been tryin' to strike Lost mine, hopin' to find Pepita. God, if ever I found it I'd never leave again. And I can see it now, as well as ever before, with the fruits and flowers, and my gal a-waitin' for me."

Suddenly a marked change came over the old man's face. He sat up and extended his arms.

"Pepita!" he shouted. "Look, thar she stands, stranger. I found her—jest as I told you—and she ain't grown old! I'm comin', Pepita!"

Haynes folded the blanket over the dead face.

What Calumet Means.

The Calumet region is the name given to a district in northern Indiana and Illinois lying between the Calumet river and Lake Michigan. Originally it was composed entirely of sand ridges and marshes. It is now a great industrial district, comprising such cities as Hammond, Gary, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and Whiting. Sometimes the entire region around the southern shores of Lake Michigan is spoken of as the Calumet district. The word "calumet" was the name given by the French to a pipe used by the Indians. This pipe, sometimes called the peace pipe, was the emblem of peace and hospitality. It was smoked to confirm all treaties between tribes. To refuse the calumet corresponded to a declaration of war, and to accept it meant peace and friendship.

Five boy scouts of Phillipsburg, Mont., gave excellent assistance in reporting and fighting a forest fire near that city, according to word received by forest officials of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Hollywood, Cal.—Figures compiled during the last five years by the large-est moving picture producing companies reveal that the aspirant to stardom in the films must overcome a 50-000-to-1 chance of achieving success.

The figures indicate that, in the last five years, screen service bureaus of Hollywood have supplied more than 100,000 men, women and children who at first were inexperienced in moving picture work. Of these 100,000, not to exceed six or seven have reached a point where their names were carried on the screen, and only two have become stars of any magnitude.

Many included in the figures had some theatrical experience, and the contrast is drawn with the fact that nearly all the prominent stars and featured players have had stage experience.

Banjo Now First Aid
To Swimming Novice

JOSEPHINE
GUERIN

Miss Guerin, High Diver, Adds Orchestra To Aquatic Curriculum

New York City.—Stroking to the strum of a banjo has become so popular here that swimming classes have small orchestras as a matter-of-course part of their equipment, declares Josephine Guerin, famous professional swimmer and high diver.

"The orchestras," explains Miss Guerin, "are non-professional and take their turn at swimming before the class is over just as the swimmers take their turn at orchestra-ing.

Violin and Cello.

"I tried the experiment one day
of asking two friends to play
'Midnight Waltz' on the violin and cello when I was trying to teach the breast stroke. They sat on the pool's edge in their bathing suits and the pupils never dreamed at first that the music had any serious angle.
"The result was so good that I explained to them what I was trying to do and after that, those who had any musical turn, insisted upon continuing the concerts. You see, the music takes the mind off the breathing, which is the stumbling block to most beginners. At the same time that it distracts the mind, it produces rhythm, and instinctively the legs and arms follow the beat."

Directions

Miss Guerin's directions for the breast stroke follow:

POSITION: Hands clear in front,
palms down, both legs together, straight behind you.

FIRST STROKE: Turn palms, pull to sides with both arms, keeping arms on a level with shoulders.

SECOND STROKE: Palms facing
each other with elbows back, pulling in to the side of the body.

THIRD STROKE: Palms extending forward, arms straight, body floating, using frog kick for complete stroke.

Breathing for the breast stroke,
is inhaling at first stroke, exhaling at third.

TENEMENT ARMY OF
WALL STREET UNITED

Clubhouse and Playground
Provided by Corporations.

New York.—Wall street with its skyscrapers houses an office population of 800,000 by day and is held by a tenement garrison of 10,000 by night.

Wall street is the sole livelihood of this skeleton force of nightfolk. In discharge of a sense of obligation it has quietly fostered an interesting piece of citizenship work the last ten years.

The major result of the work, leaders say, has been to convert the district from New York's most polyglot belt, with 1,400 families representing 23 nationalities, into probably its most closely knit, most homogeneous community.

Financed by 1,000 Corporations.

The work is financed by 1,000 corporations, firms and individuals under the name of the Bowling Green Neighborhood associations.

The activity is expressed, for example, in terms of a model four-story dwellinghouse on West street for headquarters; a $500,000 playground covering nine city lots on the river front; 25 flourishing orchestras and clubs for young people; nine social and political clubs and lodges for adults; educational classes, health clinics and community services in general which the association operates either singly or in conjunction with uptown agencies.

Irish pioneers, later joined by Austrians, Syrians and Greeks, head the census in downtown Manhattan, which also includes Slavs, Turks, Armenians, Serbs, Rumanians, Scandinavians and other nationalities seemingly too diverse ever to bring together. Yet racial demarcations, socially considered, are disappearing, association heads assert.

Common Employment Has Helped.

Common employment has helped toward this coalescence. Wall street buildings like the Equitable, Empire and the various banks carry on their payrolls for cleaning and other work

Famous Mount

The Mount of Olives is a ridge with three summits, stretching north and southeast of Jerusalem, in height 150 feet above the city, 400 feet above the intervening valley of Kedron and 2,682 feet above sea level. It derives its name from the fact that it was at one time studded with olive trees.

Private O'Leary, V. C.

Michael O'Leary, one of the first men to win the Victoria cross in the war and now a resident of Canada, has been released from custody by United States Immigration officials; he has been cleared of the charge of trying to smuggle aliens into this country. Michael won the cross in the early fighting in the Ypres sector. Alone, he advanced up to an enemy machine gun nest and killed half the crew, compelling the other half to surrender and bring their guns along with them. Michael was brought to London to be decorated by the king. Admiral Lord Fisher, that hard-bitten old sea dog, was standing about at the time of the ceremony and remarked: "Mr. O'Leary, you're a d—d good fighter, I wish to God I had you in the navy!"—Pierre Van Paassen in Atlanta Constitution.

Filibuster Developed to Nth Degree in Austria

Vienna.—A committee of the Austrian national assembly has been giving a striking exhibition of obstruction of the public business by a process of talking a measure to death. There is no regulation to prevent the committeemen from speaking forever, and some of them have declared their intention to talk until they gain their point, irrespective of the merits of the case.

There came before the committee the question of nominating a chairman to look into the question of city rents. The Social Democrats were opposed to Doctor Kienbock, former minister of finance, who was desired by a majority of the committee. They began a series of endless speeches on the duties of the chairman, and have kept this up for eight weeks.

One member, Herr Witternigg, has spoken for forty-eight hours, spread over a period of seven days. He recently announced he would "mumble" for seven days more. His method is to utter a word every thirty seconds, or two words a minute, and thus to prolong indefinitely his discourse.

Dancing an Old Pastime

Dancing dates so far back that it is lost in antiquity, for the oldest peoples known to have inhabited the earth had forms of dancing not unlike those which still exist. The first ballet, however, was given in Italy in 1480 and was introduced into France a century later.

TABLETS PROMISE LIGHT ON HISTORY

Yale Collection May Clear Up Abraham's Time

New Haven, Conn.—The J. Pierpont Morgan Babylonian collection, numbering several thousand cuneiform inscriptions and with other collections giving Yale university the largest number of unpublished tablets in the country, is expected to yield new light and fresh discoveries, making the time of Abraham, about 2,000 B. C., as familiar to this generation as history of a few centuries ago. Prof. Albert T. Clay, of the Yale archeology department, announced here.

Several generally accepted theories regarding the beginning of civilization have been upset by the cuneiform inscriptions so far deciphered, Professor Clay asserts. One of these is the belief that Abraham belonged to the dawn of civilization. Inscriptions at Yale show records of 20 Babylonian kings who preceded him, and show remarkable advances in natural culture.

Business Records Included.

Professor Clay, former president of the American Oriental Society, has found on these tablets literary inscriptions, epics and hymns, prayers, omen and divination texts, syllabaries or dictionaries, and mathematical and medical treatises. Furthermore there are legal and business transactions recorded, documents and archives of the temples, personal and official letters and inscribed bricks.

"It is not generally known that Yale has one of the world's largest collections of cuneiform inscriptions," Professor Clay said. "It was through the munificence of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, who in 1910 established a chair of Assyriology at Yale in memory of his friend, William M. Laffan, the owner and editor of the New York Sun, that the creation of the Yale Babylonian collection was made possible."

"In 1921 it was magnificently augmented by the late Dr. James B. Niles, who bequeathed his collection of cuneiform inscriptions to Yale, where it had been previously deposited, together with a fund of $50,000 for its enlargement and publication. Including the gifts of several others, the Yale collection now numbers nearly 20,000 inscriptions. The Pierpont Morgan Library Babylonian collection numbering several thousand inscriptions, is also deposited at Yale."

These inscriptions are being made accessible to scholars. The Yale Press is publishing three different series of texts, the Yale, Niles and Morgan series, as well as a series of oriental researches. Twelve volumes of texts have already appeared, and several others are in course of preparation.

In addition, several volumes of researches bearing upon these texts also have appeared. The publication of these volumes was made possible through funds given by Ogden H. Hammond, '93 S., and George A. Kohut.

Forty kings of Babylonia and Assyria are represented in the collection by their personal inscriptions, while many others are represented by objects dated in their reigns. No less than a dozen rulers are represented by inscribed terra cotta cones in the shape of huge, roughly made nails. These contain records of the kings' pious acts in reconstructing temples or erecting shrines.

Tablet Contains Laws.

One of the treasures of the Yale collection is a tablet containing laws which have proved to be a prototype of the Hammurabi code. This tablet belongs to the earliest of laws at present known. Yahweh is recorded as the author of Israel's laws, while Shamash is depicted in relief giving laws to Hammurabi. The tablet says the laws are those of Nisaba, a goddess, and Khani, a god.

The most notable literary production as yet discovered in Babylonia is the epic which recounts the exploits and adventures of Gilgamesh, one of the earliest kings of the land. This is known from an Assyrian version on twelve tablets from the library of Ashurbanipal (685-626 B. C.), now preserved in the British museum. Unfortunately, the tablets are so fragmentary that only about half the epic has been preserved.

The Yale collection possesses a tablet giving a Babylonian version of this great epic, written fifteen centuries earlier than the Assyrian. It is the third of the series, the second having been secured by the University of Pennsylvania. These tablets of the early version supply missing portions of the epic. Each tablet has a lump of clay on each side, in order to protect it from being injured while resting on the shelf in the libraries of antiquity.

Finally, several thousand legal and business documents, deeds, leases, contracts of almost every description, including marriage and dowry contracts, particularly agreements, promissory notes, mortgages and documents granting the power of attorney, concerning bankruptcy, inheritance and divorce are found in the collection.
